The Tudor Revival and Craftsman-style building serving the Woman’s Club of Palo Alto marks its 100th anniversary this year. The one-story meeting hall at the corner of Homer Avenue and Cowper Street has been in continual use as a women’s club for social and civic meetings since its construction in 1916. The Woman’s Club, founded in 1894, was just 12 years old when it raised $1,500 to buy the lot at 475 Homer Avenue. It took club members another decade to raise the $10,590 for construction.

Once built, the Clubhouse served as the site of Red Cross bandage-rolling during World War I and was a center of campaigning for women to gain the right to vote. The building was a meeting place for Palo Alto’s early Home and School group, a precursor to the PTA. It was a venue for organizing support for some of the first women to hold elective office in Palo Alto as well as a place for bridge games, flower and fashion shows, cake contests and rummage sales to benefit needy students. In the 1950s, the Club leased the space to several Palo Alto churches to hold their weekly services. The building has hosted performances by many musical groups, including the Fortnightly Music Club and West Bay Opera. Today — when not in use by the 230 active members of the Woman’s Club for luncheons, speakers, bridge, service committees and the like—the Clubhouse is often rented for weddings and other social or corporate events.

In January of this year, the Clubhouse gained listing on the National Register of Historic Places thanks to the initiative and efforts of two Woman’s Club members, Margaret Feuer and Marilyn McDonald who wrote “Submitting the application allowed us to showcase our building and the activities of its members in the proud history of Woman’s Clubs”.

Architect Charles Hodges, who served as resident architect of Stanford University from 1900 to 1906, designed the building. The exterior of the main façade is stucco above the sills of large windows. Below is a band of wood clapboarding that runs around the entire building. Decorative half-timbering, details of the main entry portico, and doorways and windows are all wood. Large oak trees surround the building. The interior of the building includes a foyer, ballroom for lunches, programs and events, dressing room, kitchen, “fireside room,” men’s and women’s restrooms and a small office for board and committee meetings. Many of the interior floors are original, with maple tongue and groove in the ballroom and fir and oak flooring in the office and elsewhere. The interior walls in the ballroom and fireside rooms are original, with fir board and batten wainscot and plaster walls and ceiling. The stage floor is oak. The stage fire curtain, installed in 1926, is covered with advertisements for local businesses of the day. The curtain was installed by an advertising agency, which charged local businesses for advertising space and paid the Woman’s Club $500.

PAST Membership

It’s time to renew your membership for 2017. We appreciate your continuing support. It allows us to promote the importance of historic preservation through spring and fall walking tours, centennial plaque awards, preservation awards, member meetings, newsletters and a resource rich website. We are researching the history of the local preservation movement—when did it start, who led the activities and what were the significant accomplishments.

PAST has an important role in this history. The research will produce a document that preserves the currently untold story.

You should receive a letter in the near future asking for your renewal—please help PAST to continue its mission of advocating the preservation of the historic architecture, neighborhoods, and character of the greater Palo Alto–Stanford area through informed citizen involvement and education.

Palo Alto’s 125th Anniversary

It’s time to start brainstorming about how Palo Alto, in 2019, should celebrate its 125 years of incorporation. Founded in 1894, there have been major events recognizing its 75th and 100th anniversaries so let’s continue the tradition. Do you have any suggestions for city wide activities? How can PAST make a meaningful contribution to this milestone event? One highlight should be the opening of a time capsule. I discovered PAHA archive photos of 4 time capsules installed in the City Hall basement during the 100th celebration in 1994. They are marked to be opened every 25 years until we reach our 200th anniversary! It’s not too soon to start planning for the 125th since the 100th party took over 5 years of preparation.

PAST’s 30th Anniversary

Next year, 2017, will be the 30th anniversary of the founding of our organization. We will celebrate this milestone at the May 2017 National Preservation Month awards program. Please share your thoughts and memories about PAST’s past with us. You can email them to webmaster@pastheritage.org or mail them to PAST, PO Box 308, Palo Alto, CA 94302.

It is the only such curtain still in use in Palo Alto today.

From the fall of 2015 through this spring, the Woman’s Club of Palo Alto held a series of events to celebrate the centennial of its Clubhouse, including a women-only 1920s-speakeasy-style “Founders Follies.” In June, the Club hosted California Historical Society Executive Director and CEO Anthea Hartig for a talk on “Pride in Preservation.” The following day, Club members, sporting 1920s attire, opened the Clubhouse doors to the public for tours, refreshments and a rededication ceremony.

2016 Preservation Awards Presented May 15

Neighborhood Preservation Award
Presented to the Greenmeadow Community Association in recognition of their 2005 listing as a Historic District on the National Register of Historic Places. Built in 1954-55, the Greenmeadow subdivision is a significant example of Eichler aesthetics of mid-20th century modernist style with an unique centralized community center. The Eichler Historic Quest Committee deserves special recognition for their extensive work to establish the foundation for the historic district registration. The continuing efforts of the Greenmeadow Architecture Review Committee serves to protect and preserve the character of this Historic District.

Neighborhood Preservation Award
Presented to the Green Gables Community in recognition of their 2005 listing as an Historic District on the National Register of Historic Places. Built in 1950, the Green Gables subdivision is a significant example of Eichler aesthetics with mid-20th century modernist style. The Eichler Historic Quest Committee deserves special recognition for their extensive work to establish the foundation for the historic district registration.

Residential Preservation Award: 175 Byron Street
Presented to Kent & Crindy Stormer in recognition of their commitment to preserving this unusually detailed example of the Square Cottage building type. Built in 1908, it is one of the oldest surviving homes that defined the earliest character of Palo Alto. They initiated an HRE which established their home’s eligibility for a Category 2 listing in the Palo Alto Historic Buildings Inventory.

Commercial Rehabilitation Award: 261 Hamilton Ave., Medico-Dental Building
Presented to Hamilton Ramona Partners, Owner, Cody Anderson Wasney, Architect, and Cody Brock Builders, Contractor for the historic rehabilitation of this Birge Clark reinforced concrete building improved seismic safety, restored ground floor storefronts, steel windows and terracotta roof tile, and uncovered tiles that marked the entrance of an early Palo Alto Post Office. Compatible hand-painted tile, light fixtures, and stucco restoration have brought new life to this important landmark.
Margaret Feuer

Preservationist of the Year in recognition of her commitment to actions that promote historic preservation at the local level. Her many contributions include writing A Walk Through History: Women of Palo Alto in 1994, campaigning for preserving the Juana Briones house, PAST President and Board member, 2007–2013, writing over 200 articles on historic houses for the Daily News, and obtaining a listing on the National Register of Historic Places for The Woman’s Club in 2015. While on the PAST Board, Margaret researched centennial homes, conducted walking tours, managed two Holiday House tours, and negotiated the preservation easement for 601 Melville. Her dedication to local historic preservation is constant and ongoing.

Dennis Backlund

Lifetime Achievement in recognition of his tireless commitment and dedication to Palo Alto’s history and architectural heritage. A life-long professionalism served to build community trust and enthusiasm for preservation not only in Palo Alto but in the larger region. His knowledge, expertise and caring has well served Palo Alto’s values.

Gail Woolley

Lifetime Achievement in recognition of her many years of leading the fight to preserve local history. Since the late 1960s Gail has championed the preservation of historic buildings in Palo Alto through co-authoring ...Gone Tomorrow?, the 1971 AAUW booklet and campaigning to save the Squire House and the WWI Hostess House. She was the first chair of the Historic Resources Board (1980) and was president of the Palo Alto Historical Association. Gail, through her continuing participation in civic efforts to preserve Palo Alto’s historic legacy, is a role model for future preservation activists.
